It was Aristotle who said the whole is more than the sum of its parts, which is oh so true with the Middleton Grand Chandelier. Were its interlocking squares created by wrought-iron bands fashioned any other way, it wouldn't be the smartly designed light fixture that it is. The frame of this eight-light chandelier perfects the illusion of diminishing perspective, its contemporary silver leaf finish so fitting it's a philosophical given. We also offer this fixture in a smaller size in several finishes.
