

Birdbath Care: The birdbath has a UV-protective coating to prevent fading and make cleaning easier. However, any item exposed to the elements will eventually fade. The sediment build-up should be cleaned periodically to keep the surface looking nice. There may be good cleaning products made specifically for this purpose that will cause no harm to birds. The National Audubon society recommends using a 9:1 solution of vinegar and water. Baking soda can also be used safely for more stubborn stains. Whatever cleaning solution is used, be sure to rinse well. Never use anything with stiff bristles or abrasives as they will harm the finish.
