Take a trip to the beach with Jamie Beckwith. Her Seychelles Chandelier, which joins her collection of lighting, was inspired by an island-hopping vibe. The frame is made of wrought iron in a sugar white finish. From this extends hand-cut sprays of raffia that are cinched by three rows of pale hand-strung wood beads. When light wafts through the strands of the natural material harvested from palm trees, a warm glow is emitted. The aircraft cable from which the tan chandelier is hung keeps the composition airy.
